In Situ Archaeology Site Visit

Between March 10-12, In Situ senior archaeologist Nikolai Rambo will be conducting a preliminary surface survey with the Homalco Guardians. The work will be focused on determining the presence of archaeological materials in the Willow Creek Watershed. This will help the team determine recommendations for further archaeological work, in preparation for future flood risk mitigation work.

The team will begin at 8:30am each day, working their way through the numbered sites marked in the map below. You may see Nik and the Guardians walking around Willow Creek on those days. Thank you for your patience!

In Situ Archaeology Site Visit – Meet Nikolai Rambo!

Nikolai received his Bachelors of Arts in Archaeology from Simon Fraser University in 2018. He has archaeological experience ranging from the Central Interior of British Columbia all the way to Medieval Portugal. Nik also has extensive experience working in Homalco territory in recent years, including up Bute Inlet. His passions in the studies of conflict, ethics, and cartography drive him in his archaeological pursuits.
